

A beautiful resting place in the bush

CENTRAL COAST NOONAWEENA

Noonaweena is a place of delightful contrasts. Set high on a ridge commanding majestic views over Yengo National Park, this boutique haven is in the very heart of the bush, yet is just 45 minutes from outer Sydney and 45 mins to Central Coast beaches. It's a striking example of contemporary architecture, yet totally in tune with its natural environment.

And, despite its sophisticated interiors and modern facilities, it remains a welcoming country house, offering guests a unique opportunity to connect with the land.

Until recently, Noonaweena was exclusively for the pleasure of small groups of up to 16 people, coming together in peace and privacy for stylish family celebrations, pastoral retreats, memorable weddings or corporate meetings.

But the property has been extended to cater for the demand of couples seeking a restorative weekend bed and breakfast in this most remarkable environment.

The newly-built Gynea House has five large bedrooms each with their own bathroom or ensuite, two living areas, gas fireplace, ceiling fans and air conditioning, and large kitchen and dining room. Outside, enjoy an entertaining area complete with BBQs and roomy heated spa.

An additional apartment, the ultra-modern executive suite Treetops, is also available on weekends. Fully self-contained with a large king bedroom, office area, spa bathroom, large modern kitchen/dining/living area, large deck with stainless steel BBQ, it's an ideal couple's retreat.

Spend your weekend exploring the secluded nature trails that criss-cross the 100 acre property, take to the tennis court and afterwards enjoy a massage or revive in the spa.

If can tear yourself away, you'll find golf, paintball and horseriding nearby. But with Noonaweena more than living up to the translation of its Aboriginal name - "resting place in the bush" - chances are you won't roam too far.
